Sustainable Development

Fast-tracking research into societal transformation

The University of Copenhagen in collaboration with Future Earth invite researchers and practitioners to participate in the process Transformation Labs, Researching Pathways towards Sustainable Development – A laboratory for testing ideas, problems, and proposals that can fast-track research for sustainable development.

The process builds on the six entry points for sustainable development as introduced in the UN Global Sustainable Development Report 2019.

What it gives

Hands-on experience with global conversations and challenges
Contact to people in practice and policy-making in your field of expertise
A global network
